Sonja Berg has always kept her Jewish heritage hidden from others. She works as a nurse but dreams of doing more for people in need. The war takes its toll on her and she thinks about it night and day, suffering with her relatives stuck in the German concentration camps around Europe.

When Britt visits her and tells her that the Red Cross needs nurses for a secret project in Germany, Sonja becomes curious. It turns out to be Folke Bernadotte who initiated a rescue operation to bring home Norwegian and Danish prisoners of war from Germany.
